

Brief review of randomly selected documents used by the FCC Working Group does not appear to support the proposed changes in FCC regulations. These changes would be likely to result in greater concentration of media control and risks for monopolistic and exploitive practices. Furthermore, the proposed changes are antithetical to supporting healthy competition and diversity of viewpoints necessary for a free society.